BIG BICYCLE DAY
FOR MILTON FOLKCYCLING PARADE AND TOURNA-MENT A SUCCESS.

Over a Hundred Wheels in Line—Good Time Made Over Ordinary Country Roads—Corn Binders, Straw Presses and Threshers Kept Busy Through the County.

THE GAZETTE AGENCY
W. W. CLARKE, Manager
Milton, Wis., Sept. 24 1897.

Thursday was Milton's first bicycle day and it was an unqualified success, in point of attendance, if in nothing else. The number present approached the thousand mark and the afternoon was enlivened with music by the Milton Junction-Milton Volunteer Cornet band, who played much better than any one anticipated they could, taking into consideration their lack of practice. One hundred and ten persons of both sexes appeared in the parade prior to the races, and made a very favorable impression. The nine mile road race had eleven starters and was hotly contested and the time of the winner, taking into consideration the fact that the race was run over ordinary country roads, not free from teams even, was good. The winner and the second man were but a few inches apart at the wire, the former going to the front in the last fifty feet of the race, making an exciting finish. The prizes included a gold medal, worth $15, to the winner of the road race, watch-chain, bicycle shoes, cyclometers, lamps, sweaters, innertubes, stockings, fountain pen, Milton college sterling souvenir spoon, eleven buttons, knife and a dozen cabinet photographs. The following is a summary of the races and the prize winners:

TO A CLAMMY CELL

DRUG FIEND MAKES AN UNDESIRABLE CHANGE.

Joseph F. Bornemann Repeats His Janesville Exploit In Chicago and Satisfies His Craving For Morphine—Police Finally Take Him In Hand and Lock Him Up.

Joseph F. Bornemann was the star patient at the Palmer Memorial hospital for seven days. He went from here to Chicago, worked the same game and now occupies a banner cell in the Sheffield avenue police station. It will be remembered that he was found almost unconscious by Janesville Samaritans and told them that he must be operated on at once for appendicitis. He was taken to the Memorial hospital and in the next seven days arrangements were made repeatedly to perform the operation. Twice he was prepared and put on the table but each time something interfered. Bornemann's favorite excuse was that he wanted to wait until his brother could reach his bedside. The physician grew tired of waiting for that brother finally and Bornemann saw something must be done so he recovered.

distasteful to the German hospital in Chicago have been almost identical. He came to the hospital eight days ago. He was well dressed and of pleasing address. He inquired for President Burmeister, and to him explained, in a plausible manner that he was suffering severely from appendicitis. He wished to have everything possible done to alleviate his pain and bring about his recovery. President Burmeister was favorably impressed with the stranger and took him to be a man of wealth and culture.

He was the Star Patient

The finest apartments in the building were given to Bornemann. At his request two trained nurses were ordered to care for him alone. The best physician was put on his case, with special instructions to give him the best of attention. For the first few hours the new patient bore his apparent sufferings bravely. A kind nurse was always at his side to fan him or smooth his pillow. A delightfully fresh breeze came through the large windows.

But his pain at last seemed to become unbearable and he tossed and groaned in his agony. The attending physician decided that the only way to relieve his patient was by the use of morphine. A large dose of the drug seemed necessary to allay such intense pain, and it was given. The drug had a remarkable effect. It appeared to do the patient more good than anything that had been tried. He rested comfortably, and the nurse had little trouble.

Only Morphine Gave Relief.

In spite of the excellent effect of the morphine, its action seemed to cause only temporary relief. Bornemann would go into spasms of pain, which nothing but morphine would relieve. These spells recurred with rather alarming frequency and several of the hospital physicians were called into consultation on the case.

So serious seemed Bornemann's condition that they advised an operation. In spite of his protests he was placed on an operating table, and the surgeons got their keen instruments in readiness. The patient made such a demonstration that he was finally let go. For a short time he got along nicely, but the old intense pains returned and he was given morphine.

Five different times he was placed on the operating table, and once or twice felt slightly the keen edge of the knife, but each time he begged off on one excuse or another. One reason he gave for not being operated on by the hospital surgeons was that he had a brother in Minneapolis who was a surgeon, and he preferred to submit himself to his brother if he really needed to have an operation performed.

Drug Fiend Admits Trickery.

The physicians and nurses were so persistent in their efforts to bring about a recovery that Bornemann saw he must either get well or submit to an operation. After eight days in the hospital he said that he felt well enough to be cut. He dressed and said he would take a short walk, as the air might do him good. Before allowing Bornemann to leave the building, President Burmeister spoke of the bill which had been contracted at the hospital. Bornemann saw that he could not dodge its settlement, and informed President Burmeister that he had no money.

This trickery was too much for Burmeister, and he sent for the Sheffield avenue police. At the station Bornemann confessed that it was all a trick to spend the time amid pleasant surroundings, and have plenty of morphine. The police say that Bornemann is a morphine fiend. It has been learned that he tricked the Cook county hospital and the Chicago hospital in the same manner.

Small precautions often prevent great mischief. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are very small pills in size, but are most effective in preventing the most serious forms of liver and stomach trouble. They cure constipation and headache and regulate the bowels. C. D. Stevens.

IF THE BABY IS CUTTING TEETH—Be sure and use that old and well tried remedy Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, always all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

A LETTER TO WOMEN

From Mrs. James Corrigan.

For seventeen years I have suffered. Periods were so very painful that I would have to go to the doctor every month.

He said that I had an enlargement of the womb, and told my husband that I must undergo an operation, as I had tumors in the womb, and it was a case of life or death.

I was operated upon twice, but it did not seem to do me any good, it made me very weak. I was troubled with the leucorrhoea a great deal.

I also suffered with the sick headache, vomiting, spells, backache all the time, terrible pain in my left side, chills, loss of appetite, and could not sleep nights. After taking several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, some Liver Pills, and using your Sanative Wash, I recovered.

I can eat well, and every one that sees me tells me I am a different person. I can do all my own work, sleep well and feel well. I am growing stronger every day, and am able to go out and enjoy a walk and not feel all tired out when I return, as I used to. I doctored for sixteen years, and in all those years I did not feel as well as I do at the present time. I wish that every woman that is troubled as I was, would try that medicine. Oh! it is so good to feel well, and it is all owing to Mrs. Pinkham's kind advice and medicine.

Janesville-Rockford Electric Line Is Watched With Interest In Dixon

Oregon and Dixon are very much interested in the proposed electric line from Janesville to Rockford, through Beloit, and have revived the talk of the possibility of the road being extended south from this city to those places. The Ogle County Republican discusses the matter at length and concludes with this paragraph:

"Messrs. A. P. Lee and E. J. Bast, the general agent and civil engineer, respectively of the Interstate railway, have promised a visit to Oregon the last of the week to look over what we have to offer as an inducement to continue the line to Oregon, and probably to Dixon, and to look over the proposed route, and estimate the expense of building the same. Oregon has felt for years the necessity of getting in touch with the outside world and will offer every possible inducement to get into the current if there be a possible chance to better our condition."

The Dixon Telegraph grows enthusiastic over the plan and has this to say:

"We hope that the Rock River Electric Railway company (with officers in Rockford, Oregon and Dixon) which has already done so much of the preliminary work for a direct railway connection between Dixon and Rockford, will at once take the matter up, and acting in conjunction with the Interstate Railway company, secure eventually a direct rapid transit line from this city to Madison, Wis."

EXPRESS CARRIED TO ALASKA

Janesville Agents Receive Word That Shipments May Be Accepted.

Those having friends in the Klondike region can now send clothing or food by express. Local express agents received word this week that the forming of the Alaskan Pacific Express company make deliveries possible.

How about the rate? Just leave that to the express companies. Although the rate isn't as high as it would be to send a package around the world it comes very near it. The express matter goes from here to Juneau by boat and from Juneau inland by dog sleds.

Prompt Reform of Bodily Evils.

The prompt reform of those bodily evils, enfeebled digestion, incomplete assimilation, inactivity of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, as well as of the nervous system which these ailments are especially prone to beget, is accomplished by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a medicine accredited by physicians, pronounced pure by analysis, and eminently wholesome and agreeable. Surely such a restorative is preferable to unpalatable and indigestible mineral drugs and unsanctioned nostrums. The nation at large assuredly thinks so, judging by the unprecedented demand for the article from Maine to the Pacific, a demand now supplemented by immense orders for it received from tropical America, Mexico, the British and Spanish colonial possessions, and elsewhere. Both at home and abroad it is recognized as a standard remedy and preventive, the decisiveness of its effects recommending it everywhere.

ARE BALING AWAY THE CROPS

Straw Presses, Threshers and Corn Binders Are Busy in South Clinton.

South Clinton, Sept. 24.—Straw presses are busy these days, also corn binders, potato diggers and threshers. The fair given by the Dorcas society, at Henry Natesta's, was a success in every way. Clarence and Edwin Dresser are again in school in Beloit. Mr. and Mrs. Westby, of Clinton, have been spending a few days with their daughter, Mrs. E. L. Benedict. O. J. Dresser has been putting in underground water pipes, to carry the water across the road. Erb. Bates took the prize for the tallest stalk of corn, Market day, at Beloit. J. Dresser is attending school in Clinton. Mrs. Patch visited Beloit, Monday. Mrs. E. O. Benedict has a cousin visiting her, this week. Mrs. Charles Dresser drove to Whitewater by way of Janesville, recently.

South Turtle Personal Notes.

South Turtle, Sept. 24.—Mrs. Moore is still very poorly. School has commenced in the Murray district. Charles Gault and horses were a prominent feature of Market day at Beloit. Miss May Crockett is again at her post in the Clinton schools. Mrs. Rohlfing is visiting in the northern part of the state.

Running sores, indolent ulcers and similar troubles, even though of many years standing may be cured by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It soothes, strengthens and heals. It is a great pile cure. C. D. Stevens.

Ball Twenty Years Ago.

He hadn't been in a ball game for 20 years. He was one of the veterans who talk about the old Knoxville Reds and about the merits of John Houk or Martin Condon as pitchers and of Will Hunt as a catcher.

"They didn't need any of them bird-catchers and chest protectors in the old days, I tell you. The catcher stood right up to the bat with nothing on but an undershirt, and if he got hit in the face he went right on with the game, and what's them hams they carry round on their hands?" said the old fellow.

"Oh, all the catchers and fielders now wear mitts! It's easier to catch flies, you know."

"Well, that beats my time!" said the old veteran. "Mitts? I reckon that's to keep their hands from getting hurt. Why, doggone my cats, the fielders in the sixties didn't wear nothing! They'd have been ashamed. They didn't think nothing of having two or three broken fingers and going right along with the game. Say, the wimmen could play this game, I reckon. It's putty nigh as soft as long tennis or croquet."

"Say, why didn't that chump ketch that foul on the bound? Have to ketch 'em on the fly, does he? Why, by Jinks, in my day a feller had to know just how it was going to bounce, and you bet it took good judgment to tell which way the thing was a-goin'."

"And they loved them jist as many balls as they wanted and plenty of strikes too. This newfangled concern ain't no good. Mighty good thing that they erected a monument to the memory of Harry Wright, but I'll bet you he remembered what a good game they used to have in the old days when they only had one pitcher and one catcher."

And the old man rambled on and thought this thing of making two or three runs to a game was a bad piece of playing.—Knoxville Tribune.

Varied Methods.

"I suppose," said the young woman with the inquiring mind, "that most people who go in search of gold get it by working the creeks and chasms."

"Mostly, miss," replied Derringer Pete; "though once in awhile some fellow gets a lot of it by working a bluff."

—Washington Star.

Home Grown Aristocracy.

"Why did your daughter break her engagement with that English earl?"

"Because I told her that, with the present prices for wheat, she would better try to catch an American farmer."

—Chicago Record.

Safe from Squandering.

Mrs. Shadbolt—I think it's a shame—the reckless way you spend your money. You never seem to think it's time to begin to lay up something for old age! No, I don't want you to speculate, but I do think you might put a little money in some permanent investment once in awhile.

Mr. Shadbolt (with evident reluctance)—That's what I've been doing, my dear. I lent Dinguss ten dollars this morning.—Chicago Tribune.

NO FRILLS ABOUT CORLISS.
A Chief Justice Who Works in the Harvest Field.
Chief Justice Guy C. H. Corliss of North Dakota has no finicky ideas as to judicial dignity. During the course of his recent summer vacation he went into the harvest field in his shirt sleeves and worked with his farmhands from sun up to sun down, following the reaper with the best of them. He has a theory that every man, no matter what profession he may follow, should know how to earn his living by the labor of his own hands, and there is not the slightest doubt that the chief justice could do it, for he is a big, brawny, broad shouldered six footer whose angular frame is muscular and sinewy.
When Justice Corliss was elected to the bench eight years ago, he was the youngest chief justice in the country, being at that time only 31 years of age. The constitution of the new state provided that no person should fill the office who had not been a resident of the state for five years. Mr. Corliss had been in a vast income and a large amount of oats of the wild variety and entirely unknown. As was quite natural, he proceeded to make up for lost time. He struck such a rapid gait that the emperor or banished him. At that time there was little prospect of his ever reaching the throne, but the sudden sensational

CHIEF JUSTICE CORLISS.
North Dakota but three years, but he wanted to be chief justice. He went to Bismarck and by personal appeal induced the constitutional convention to amend the clause so that it should read three years instead of five.
Judge Corliss has a fine home at Grand Forks and an extensive vegetable and flower garden which he cultivates himself. He has a wife and four children. The boys he is bringing up according to his own ideas of manliness.
Not long ago his eldest son, Harold, aged 10, made a request for a bicycle. "If you want a bicycle, you must earn it," said the judge. So he taught the boy how to milk and made arrangements to make Harold the family milkman for the coming fall and winter. By next spring Harold will have enough money to get the bicycle.

AN ERRATIC ARCHDUKE.
Career of the Heir Presumptive to the Austrian Throne.
The recently reported marriage of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir presumptive to the throne of Austria, to a woman who not only has a brother who is a tradesman, but has herself been a housekeeper, has furnished another royal scandal and again brought the house of Hapsburg into unsavory prominence. Of course the report has been stoutly denied, but that has not stopped the gossip, and the career of the archduke is being industriously reviewed.

Franz Ferdinand is the eldest son of the late Archduke Karl Ludwig of Austria, brother of Emperor Francis Joseph, and the future ruler of Austria and Hungary. He is 34 years old and one of the richest men in Europe. While still a child he inherited all the immense wealth of the Este branch of the Hapsburgs. At the age of 8, however, he was promptly handed over to the Jesuits that he might be brought up free from the contamination of the Austrian court.
Thus it happened that when he came of age he found himself in possession of death of Crown Prince Rudolph made him an important personage. He was hastily recalled, and the emperor courageously undertook the task of his reformation. He took the erring heir presumptive in hand, lectured him long and earnestly and kept him constantly under his eye.

Franz Ferdinand did his best apparently to learn the duties and demeanor of a modern ruler and soon became quite a different man. Then his royal uncle tried to arrange a marriage between him and the Archduchess Dorothea, but the latter upset this plan by becoming the Duchess d'Orleans. Then the archduke developed symptoms of consumption. Finding that he had apparently little chance of reigning after all, it seems he has fallen into his old ways.

C. & N. W. TO SPEND BIG SUM
Million Dollars a Year May Go Into Improvements and Extensions.
The C. & N. W. will have plenty of ready cash to pay for the Jamesville depot. Fifty millions of dollars is the immense sum that was voted for improvements of the system by the stockholders of the corporation at a special meeting held in the general offices of the company, 22 First avenue. A restrictive proviso embodied in the resolution was that not more than $1,000,000 of the total amount voted may be expended annually.
The primary object of the special meeting was to consider for approval or rejection a "general refunding mortgage plan," proposed by the directors. This proposition involved arrangements for the issuance of ninety-year refunding bonds for amounts not to aggregate $165,000,000, the object being to facilitate the cancellation of outstanding obligations and materially reduce the interest on the fixed charges of the road.
The plan was unanimously adopted, and as the $165,000 is larger by $50,000,000 than the sum required for refunding purposes, the excess amount was voted for "future enlargement, improvement and extension of the road."
The vast sum it is the announced policy of the management to spend and not to hoard, the obvious result to be the probable enlargement of the fields for employment of labor in the Northwestern territory traversed by the road. For it is there or in Chicago or its vicinity that the round million will be annually spent.

MANY RIDERS ARE SUSPENDED
State Racing Board of the L. A. W. Has Weakened Its Position
Fourteen Wisconsin riders were suspended by the national racing board during the past week and all the suspensions were for riding in unsanctioned races. There have been scores of Wisconsin riders suspended during the season for riding in races that were not sanctioned and the warning does not have the slightest effect upon the riders. In every case the suspension was for a month, but it did not prevent wheelmen from riding just the same, and it did not tend to make race promoters more careful in the matter of securing sanctions for meets that were purely local. On the whole it is safe to say that there were more unsanctioned races run in Wisconsin this year than there were sanctioned events. The riders suspended are wholly local wheelmen and the promoters of small race meets are evincing a desire to have none but such riders in these contests. They succeed in this by refusing to secure a sanction which opens the race to everyone who wishes to come in.

TEMPLARS' CASE NOT HEARD
Bartender Cannot Be Punished Under the Present City Ordinance
Good Templars were advised this morning that they probably would not be able to make much headway in their election day case.
"City Attorney McElroy pointed out that the state law does not cover special license elections while the city ordinance does not provide for any case in which the bartender is the guilty party, covering only offenses committed by the person holding the license," said a member of the committee.
"The city attorney explained to us that almost the only saloon cases in which convictions had been secured before Jamesville juries were those for Sabbath violation."
"The Templars are much disappointed at not being able to secure a conviction when we had the testimony of three witnesses to a clear violation of the ordinance but we find some satisfaction in the fact that we have shown our willingness to back the city officers up in their enforcement of the law."

Fever Hospital Burns.
New Orleans, La., Sept. 24.—The Beauregard school building, which it was proposed to use as a fever hospital, and which a mob threatened to burn, was destroyed by fire. It was formerly a fine residence, occupying a square of ground out on Canal street, near the cemetery.

Robbers Are Felled.
Guthrie, O. T., Sept. 24.—An attempt to hold up the south-bound Santa Fe passenger train near Edmond at 7 o'clock Thursday night was frustrated by deputy marshals and several of Chief Kenney's men. The outlaws are being chased. Two of them are United ex-deputy marshals.

NEW MEDICAL DISCOVERY.
A Positive Cure for Dyspepsia.
This may read as though we were putting it a little strong because it is generally thought by the majority of people that Dyspepsia in its chronic form is curable, nor is it such a difficult matter as at first appears.
The trouble with Dyspepsia is that they are continually dieting, starving themselves, or going to opposite extremes or else deluging the already overburdened stomach with "bitters" "after dinner pills," etc., which invariably increase the difficulty even if in some cases they do give a slight temporary relief. Such treatment of the stomach simply makes matters worse. What the stomach wants is rest. Now how can the stomach become rested, recuperated and at the same time the body nourished and sustained.
This is the great secret and this is also the secret of the uniform success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. This is a comparatively new remedy, but its success and popularity leaves no doubt as to its merits.
The Tablets will digest the food anyway, regardless of condition of stomach. The sufferer from Dyspepsia according to directions is to eat an abundance of good, wholesome food, and use the tablets before and after each meal and the result will be that the food will be digested no matter how bad your dyspepsia may be, because as before stated, the tablets will digest the food, even if the stomach is wholly inactive. To illustrate our meaning plainly, if you take 1,800 grains of meat, eggs or ordinary food and place it in a temperature of 98 degrees, and put with it one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets it will digest the meat or eggs almost as perfectly as if the meat was enclosed within the stomach.
The stomach may be ever so weak yet these tablets will perform the work of digestion and the body and brain will be properly nourished and at the time a radical, lasting cure of dyspepsia will be made because the much abused stomach will be given, to some extent, a much needed rest. Your druggist will tell you that of the many remedies advertised to cure dyspepsia none of them has given so complete and general satisfaction as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and not least in importance in these hard times is the fact that they are also the cheapest and give the most good for the least money.

MAY GET MR. HAYET FOR COURT STREET

CONFERENCE CONSIDERING NEEDS OF CHURCHES.

Presiding Elder Pease Wins Applause
For the Janesville Charge By Referring to Its Willingness to Take a Man From the Wisconsin Conference.

Indications at the Methodist conference last evening were that Rev. Dr. Haylet would come to Court Street church in this city. Rev. B. F. Sanford is mentioned as Dr. Haylet's successor in Fond du Lac, in case the change is made.

Dr. Halsey expects an appointment accessible to Milwaukee so that he can retain his residence there for the present. His name has been mentioned in connection with Sherman Street church as being most convenient to his present business location.

District Has 5,000 Methodists

In his report on the Janesville district Presiding Elder F. A. Pease gave interesting figures. There are thirty ministers and fifty-three churches on the Janesville district and about 5,000 members. The pastors have done faithful work in preaching 3,600 sermons and making 10,000 pastoral visits. There had been a gain in membership by nearly 400 probationers received and nearly 200 received by letter. He regarded the Janesville district as a model one, either in Wisconsin or in Methodism. A new church has been dedicated at Millford, worth $1,100. The Epworth League is a feature on Janesville district, with thirty-six chapters and a membership of 2,500.

Home For Aged Ministers.

Mr. Pease reported a large bequest from the estate of James Aram, of Delavan. One thousand dollars was given toward the Methodist church at Delavan and with this as a starter a fine new church will be erected as soon as possible; $20,000 was given toward an Aram Home for aged Methodist ministers which is to be located and sustained in Delavan under the supervision of the trustees of the Wisconsin conference. The credit for this gift is due to the pastor at Delavan, the Rev. S. A. Olin, who by faithful pastoral work brought Mr. Aram into the church in his old age. The vacancy at Court Street during the latter part of the year has been so managed that the pulpit had been supplied by Wisconsin men and now the church was willing to take a Wisconsin man and was not looking for a transfer. This statement was liberally applauded by the ministers.

May Go to Asbury.

In connection with the future of the Asbury church at Milwaukee the names of the Revs. E. S. McJannet and C. E. Goldthorpe are often heard. Appleton university will do without a financial agent during the coming year, and the Rev. A. J. Benjamin is among the prominent ones for whom a place is to be found. The ministers of the Appleton district are very helpful about securing Dr. Farmer for their new presiding elder. The Marinette church has come to think that this may happen, and has called a meeting of the official board to consider the matter of pastoral supply for the next year. They have a preference for Dr. G. B. Trever of Milwaukee, but are not hopeful about securing him.

"OH! WHAT A NIGHT" SAYS EVANSVILLE

JANESVILLE OPERA COMPANY WAS A FROST.

Began a Little Before 9 and Was Over at 9:40 But Even Then the Audience Had Plenty of Suffering—Union Throwing Ended the Performance.

The visit of the Lillian Brought Opera company to Evansville will be remembered as a red letter event in the history of that town.

As many as twenty-eight people were in the hall when the company went on the stage. The show began shortly before 9 o'clock, and at 9:40 the actors were hot-footing it to the carryall ready to go home.

The audience, it might be said, were also prepared for the separation.

The show was taken to Evansville by Miss Brought and W. A. Schaar, F. P. Williams having withdrawn from the management.

According to reports from Evansville the first act went very well. The dances were good and the songs very satisfactory. When it came time for the older members of the company to go on the stage, however, sixteen of them were overcome by timidity and remained in their dressing rooms.

standing their nerves with the timidity and ragweed cigarettes that make life in Evansville a constant joy.

Bashfulness Saved Them.

That bashful sixteen were wise in their day and generation. They were spared the embarrassment of struggling with one song while the pianist played another. The audience grew noisily sympathetic, gave advice as to which tune was getting the best of it, and pointed out improvements that were needed in the stage presence of the performers. Under a superficial veil of scoffing there was deep feeling in many of the remarks, and in the interest of peace and good order, the second act was cut at both ends and hammered a little in the middle.

Drum Major Hit a Child.

As soon as the rest of the company could get off the stage they joined the ranks of the sixteen malcontents and declared they had had enough.

W. A. Schaar then went into the breach alone. He did a clever trick riding act that electrified the spectators and when he rode off the stage down the steps into the body of the house and up the steps leading to the parquette circle he was greeted by howls of applause.

A couple of fearless young men from Chicago braved the wrath of the audience and tried to do a black face act. They had the audience in a passable state of subjection until the drum major's baton that one of them was whirling flew out of his hands and hit a small child in seat No. 31 E. An onion thrown by a freckle faced young man is overall, who was giving a theater party to himself in Box A, hit the singer and the curtain came down with a rush.

DEPOT BIDDERS CALLED IN

Contractors O. F. Nowlan and James Shearer Summoned to Chicago.

There are signs in the air that the new C. & N. W. depot will soon be begun and that the work will be pushed. Superintendent F. R. Moulton had received no new information today but it was announced at the depot that Contractors O. F. Nowlan and Jas. Shearer were notified by telegram last night to meet the officials of the C. & N. W. in Chicago today. They took the early train for the city this morning.

FELL IN THE TURN TABLE PIT

Richard Finley Walks on Crutches in Consequence of a Mishap.

Richard Finley arrived home from Brownstown on the 10:30 o'clock freight last night. It stopped to let off passengers in the lower freight yards, and as Mr. Finley started off in the darkness he fell into the turn table pit. He sprained his left leg severely and now walks on crutches.

BENEATH DEATH'S CLOUD.

Funeral of James D. Holmes.

The funeral of the late Jas. D. Holmes was held at the home 23 Milwaukee avenue at 2 o'clock today. The Masonic, Pythian and Woodmen lodges attended in a body, it being impossible for more than a small proportion of the many present to enter the house. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. C. E. Elliott, of Hinsdale, Ill., for several years pastor of All Souls church in this city.

The burial was according to the Masonic ritual, J. T. Wilcox, worshipful master of Janesville Lodge No. 55, conducting the services.

The pall bearers were V. P. Richardson, Robert M. Bostwick, George G. Sutherland, W. H. Greenman, C. O. MacLean and W. T. Sherer.

Johnson.

The Washington street home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Johnson, which but a few days ago was brightened by the advent of a boy, was today shrouded in sorrow. The little one passed away at 1:45 o'clock this morning. Funeral services will be held tomorrow, the interment to be in Oak Hill cemetery.

J. M. BOSTWICK & Sons' window is full of hasecks, just in from New York. The 58c price will reduce the lot in a short time. They are worth about $1. Many bought yesterday.

JUDGE JOHN R. BENNETT is home from Jefferson.

FOOT BALL TEAM IS WEAK

Partisans of the State University Eleven Are Much Disappointed

Local admirers of the state university foot ball team need not be surprised this fall to see one of the poorest foot ball teams that ever left the university. Coach Phil King will be on deck. He will receive $1,500 for this fall's work and will not train the base ball team next spring. Karel, Richards, Ryan, Alexander, Sheldon, Atkinson and Nelson, seven of the strongest men ever on the team will not be there this season, however, and the playing will suffer in consequence.

There seems to be an indifference toward football in Madison this fall that argues ill for a brilliant season. The worst feature of the situation is that unless the Athletic association raises $1,400 before the first game is played in order to redeem overdue notes to that amount the faculty of the university may put an absolute stop to the sport.

KAISER BROS., of Madison, today purchased the balance of the O. D. Lincoln & Co. shoe stock and is to be moved to Madison.

MARKET DAY PLANS FULL OF PROMISE

TOMORROW BIDS FAIR TO BE LIVELY.

Arrangements Completed At a Meeting of the Committee Last Evening—Prizes Collected and Put In Place This Morning—Programme of Games and Races.

Preparations are being made for a big Market Day crowd. There is every indication that standing room and restaurant accommodations will be at a premium. Most of the stalls of local livery stables have been engaged, and owners of several private barns near the center of town will cater to trade.

The program for the day includes games and races for the entertainment of the crowds. Ample facilities will be given for the display of grain, stock, poultry and domestic products.

The program of games and races is as follows:

The committee of arrangements met last evening at C. S. & E. W. Putnam's store, to perfect plans. The reports that were submitted showed that everything was progressing satisfactorily and that the work of each committee had been looked after.

Prizes that were given by the merchants were today collected and placed in position.

Perfect weather is all that is now needed to make Janesville's market day a notable one.

JANESVILLE MEN FIGHTERS

Assignee Fulton Has Easier Times With His Madison Cases.

Madison members of the Odd Fellows Mutual Life Insurance company are different from their Janesville brethren. When Assignee J. U. Fulton issued summons against the Madison members for back dues they fell over one another in getting to a justice court and paying up. The fight that followed the service of the Janesville summons, therefore, surprised Assignee Fulton greatly.

THE WELL DRESSED MAN

His New Fall Clothes Make Him
Look Like an Athlete.

HE IS IN TIGHT TROUSERS AGAIN.

The Tailor Builds Up His Shoulders, Makes His Coat Loose in the Back and Snug at the Bottom and Shapes His Trousers So That He Tapers Off Toward the Ground Most Symmetrically.

"Can you tell at a glance whether a man is dressed in clothes of the 1897 fall model or whether he is wearing a suit of last season's make?"

My sartorial friend smiled—one of those easy, self confident, cocksure smiles. He makes clothes for some of the men whom New Yorkers call "the best dressers in town." He has a reputation as a fashionable tailor—and he charges for it in his bills. So he smiled.

"Of course I can," he said. "How?"

It required no little persuasion to get him to give a definite answer. He tried to dodge by claiming that it was instinct and business training. But I insisted that there must be some tangible points of distinction by which he drew his comparison. I wanted to know those points, so that I, too, could draw comparisons—could lay the rule, so to speak, over the men who thronged the west side of upper Broadway at the time when the afternoon parade was on and apply an infallible test to pretentious male apparel wherever it should appear.

He was an unwilling witness, this fashionable tailor. He did not relish at all the idea of coldly dissecting the principles which govern the well dressed man of the fall end of 1897, but he compromised by talking long and eloquently about the details of the new modes for men, and in this way I found out what I wanted to know.

The fashionably dressed man of today looks like an athlete.

He tapers—that is, his shoulders are broad and square, for his tailor sees to that if nature has not done the work—and his outlines from his shoulders down are almost those of an elongated V.

The trousers make the change. They are cut tighter than they have been for a decade.

This is one of the most radical changes we have had in male attire for some time. Understand, we have not got back to the "skin tights" of a dozen years ago. Not so bad as that, but we are drifting in that direction. The reduction in the width of the trousers leg since the exaggerated bags were fashionable has been so gradual as hardly to be noticed from year to year until now. The reason is that the tailors have been taking off a little each season until the trousers leg got down to normal size and could not stand another cut without the reduction being noticed.

That's the way most fashions originate after all. The masculine mind does not look favorably upon radical changes in clothes. They have to be made so gradual as not to excite opposition. There is no all powerful dictator who sends out in midsummer an edict as to what men should wear. Mr. Poole of London, with all his vaunted reputation, could not do it. Perhaps some people think that Mr. Mitchell of New York, who publishes the fashion plates, is the arbiter, but he isn't. He merely sees which way the tide is setting and sends out an illustrated bulletin. He serves as a sort of fashion observer, and his bulletins are read by the tailors with the same interest that the sailors read the reports of the weather observer; only the fashion observer seems to be far more successful.

But the origin of a fashion is something that can seldom be traced as can the beginning of an epidemic. Undoubtedly a score or more New Yorkers who spend much thought, time and money on their clothes have more to do with setting the fashions than any other individuals, and even in their cases their tailors, their valets, or still more obscure persons may deserve the credit. But once started a style spreads. If it

But this brings us to overcoats in general. Speaking generally, they are to be looser and shorter. Some of the light topcoats for fall wear are very short indeed. They do not exhibit, however, that wealth of bone button, strap seam and rows of stitching which made them so formidable last year. They are plain, and the full backs, without seams at all, show only a baggy expanse of cloth, which should fall from built up, broadened shoulders, without the suspicion of a wrinkle. They are made with fly fronts, and, like the coats, have no breast pocket. Combined with the narrow trousers they give even a slight man a muscular and athletic appearance.

The heavier winter coats are made double breasted and should not come much below the knee. They have the full back, too, and show only the side seams.

A new surtout is being made for late fall wear that will give the wearer the appearance of a retired military officer. Its two rows of buttons are set on at an angle instead of straight up and down, the opening being toward the top. This emphasizes the breadth of the chest. So, you see, the general tendency of the tailor is to make us all look like athletes.

In the sporting line there is something new in golf and bicycle trousers. Instead of having a buttoned cuff of melton below the knee the new trousers is the fashion to have trousers 17 inches at the bottom instead of 18, as they were cut the previous season, why should it not be still more fashionable to have them reduced to 16 inches? That is about the average of the new trousers. This means that the circumference of the trousers at the bottom should be 16 inches. From this they increase until at the knee they are 18 or 19 inches. They should be shaped to the leg, and the "beefy" bicycle rider who has developed bulging calves may make quite an impressive appearance, even in his business clothes. Some of the men who belong to the swell sporting clubs had their trousers cut that way last spring, and the innovation gained many admirers among the good dressers who haunt Fifth avenue; so this fall the scant, clinging trousers appear on the fashion plates and will soon be made by tailors all over the country.

The coat furnishes another index as to the age of the suit. If it is of this season's construction, it will have no outside breast pocket.

Just what has happened to cause this particular pocket to be abolished is not apparent. It was of no particular utility, for the practice of using it as a receptacle for a half concealed handkerchief was long ago tabooed by the sticklers for small points in style. But in some way it interfered with the symmetry of the new suit, and so it had to go.

Among other details concerning the stylish coat may be mentioned the fact that it is somewhat shorter. In cutaways, for instance, the tails should not come within four or five inches of the knee break in the trousers. Then, while plenty of room is left for the expansion of the manly chest, it should fit close about the hips. In other words, the coat tapers, too, something as the trousers do.

Cutaways made of Scotch goods for business wear sometimes have side pockets with flaps. Coats of this sort should always be worn with trousers and vest of the same material.

The rage for fancy vests is somewhat abating. The secret of it is that the fancy vest business has been run into the ground. They were made too cheaply, of all sorts of stuffs, and being common they lost caste. There is, however, a great demand for them, and this has been met by the production of some novelties for fall and winter wear. Those which are expected to be most popular are severely plain. They are made of lightweight meltons and English flannels. Of course the figured ones, those with startling designs, will be worn in some places—on the Bowery perhaps. While the fancy vest may be cut high or low, according to fancy, the suit vest will show less shirt front than ever this year, being cut rather high.

When the fashionable man dons his new evening clothes, he will have a decidedly military bearing. This is because the new full dress trousers have a strip of black silk braid, from one to three-quarters of an inch wide, down the outside seams of the leg. The tails of the clawhammer are an inch or two shorter and do not reach the knee break by several inches. The lapel should be faced clear to the edge with dull finished silk and the collar should be der of the hunting trousers, and the useless bag at the knee is done away with. Some novelties in fall haberdashery are worth mentioning. I had thought the madras outing shirts in Scotch checks and plaids of lurid colors the most unquiet articles of male apparel which could possibly be devised, but I was mistaken. A Broadway dealer showed me some shirts of French flannel the other day in comparison with which the others seemed positively subdued. These new offenses were Scotch plaids of large design and the most vivid colors. Blue, green, scarlet, orange and violet ran riot in crisscross lines. Worst of all, they are made with white linen bands so that a hunting stock and collar may be worn with them. These hunting stocks, by the way, are of equally glaring designs. If we could be sure that they would be worn only on the golf links, no one would mind them, but the bicyclist penetrates everywhere in his outing clothes, and so we must be prepared to meet at any corner plaids which would make a Scotchman deny his native heath and set a Sioux Indian wild with envy.

One of the novelties in neckwear is the bat wing tie. It is an improvement on the narrow club or string tie, for it is so shaped that when tied the knot is small, but the ends have a flare which has long been desired. A new four-in-hand only an inch and a half or an inch and a quarter wide is another novelty. These, with the long knot tecks, the ascots and the puffs, will be most worn. The colors and the designs are more subdued than they were last year, for the rage for glaring, striking colors has reached its limit.

New driving gloves are made with ribbed palms and some of them have narrow grips of rubber sewed to the palms.

Lisle thread and silk golf stockings for men are novelties too. The leg is made plain, but the cuff shows either a figured or a plaid design.

The new fall derby has a flatter crown than that of last year and it is a fraction of an inch lower. The brim is really no narrower, but is curled more tightly and that has the same effect. It has what is known as the three-quarter round curl.

But the silk hat has undergone a still more decided change. It is a mile shorter than last year. At any rate it is not so high by fully three-quarters of an inch. The crown has an increased bell, but it is not the Prince of Wales hat by a long shot. His royal highness may have a hat made of pigskin and painted green if he wishes, but the American hatter makes his own styles. The silk band has been discarded for a cloth one, and men of middle age wear a black cloth band as wide as an inch and a quarter if they wish, although young men should wear narrower bands.

For afternoon wear the Homburg alpine, a pearl gray soft hat with white band, is considered very dressy and is about the only style of soft hat which is generally worn by men who pay much attention to their clothes.

There are a few other minor canons which are recognized by earnest devotees of style, but these are the chief ones, and when you have thoroughly fixed them in your mind you can determine whether the man you meet is well dressed or only expensively attired. Remember:

His silk hat should have a bell crown and a cloth band.

His shoulders should be square.

His coat should be loose in the back and snug around the hips.

His trousers should be shaped so as to closely follow the curves of the leg.

And above all he should taper from his shoulders to his toes and have the general appearance of a football player on dress parade.

If his appearance meets all these requirements, then you can be satisfied that he has seen both his tailor and hatter within the month and you can fall to wondering how he does it on the salary he gets.

That we should deem that luck's the thing
That will to us our blessing bring
And give us honey without sting?
I don't believe it!
But that endeavor well applied,
A will that will not be denied,
Do much I'm problem to decide—
I do believe it!

That our great world, as some folks say,
Has still grown worse from day to day,
While men and morals both decay?
I don't believe it!
But that, as history will show,
The "good old times" of long ago
Have better grown, will better grow—
I do believe it!

That we are here to sorrow born,
Are given life to live forlorn,
Have more of nighttime than of morn?
I don't believe it!
But that a healthy, cheerful mind
And thankful heart e'en here may find
That God means only to be kind—
I do believe it!

AUNT JOHN.

When old Aunt John started in to sell newspapers at the bridge, she had a sorry time of it for awhile. The boys looked upon her as a dangerous business rival, because her withered arm and her pinched face touched the pocket nerve of the passerby so often that she created an appreciable diminution in the daily receipts of even Nosey Geoghegan, who had long enjoyed the prestige of being the autocrat of the row, a position he maintained by vociferation or by force of arms, as occasion demanded. But Aunt John didn't care a torn paper for Nosey, and for that matter she defied him from the very day she began calling out in cracked treble the printed lies and the printed truths she had for sale.

Nobody knew where Aunt John came from, and nobody cared. The name by which she was known was bestowed upon her by the boys themselves and was due to her habit of addressing everybody as "John"—rivals and patrons alike. She had a small, wizened face, parchment as to color and triangle as to shape, with a tufted chin as the apex, and a pair of large dark eyes, that were probably handsome eyes years ago, when her cheeks were rounded and rosy and her wrinkled throat full and white. Her figure was bent, and when she walked it was with a sort of wobble and hop, the punishment that followed the paralysis and shriveled the tissues of the poor, useless arm.

And what a curious thing that arm, or, rather, the hand that belonged to it, was! High and curved at the wrist, long, tapering fingers and white as alabaster—the hand of a patrician on the body of a plebeian. It swung to and fro like the hand of a jointed doll, and on the third finger there shone with a dimmed luster a worn circlet of gold. And every day after Aunt John had wound a string around her old fashioned portmanteau with her teeth and her living hand she would take the cold fingers of its dead fellow into her lap and caress it as a mother would a child, crooning a mumble of words under her breath.

The old woman was impervious to ridicule or abuse. She pushed forward to sell her papers with the rest of them, and gave no heed to the pulling at her skirts or the angry expostulations of her younger competitors. So, when they found that neither tricks, threats nor cajolery could move her, Aunt John was left to herself, and her old purse at night was the fullest of all, not even excepting Annie, who stood at Frankfort street and did what was generally believed to be the biggest business on Newspaper row.

One day, perhaps it was a little more than a year after Aunt John made her appearance, a small, fragile looking boy, with round, blue eyes and big blue veins in his forehead, essayed a timid attempt to enter the ranks of the juvenile news venders, who had come to look upon the bridge entrance as their special and exclusive territory. He was immediately pounced upon, the four papers he had started with as stock in trade were torn from him and he was cuffed and knocked about until he nearly fainted from fright and pain. Aunt John had seen scores and scores of fights between the boys—some of them savage and vicious, but she paid no more attention to them than she did to the clattering teams that came over the span from Brooklyn.

With one as with the other, she kept out of the way, but when the attack was made on the frail child with the china blue eyes she uttered a strange cry and sprang forward like a tigress, buffeting the attacking party with a strength that seemed almost marvelous in such a bent and twisted frame. So taken by surprise were the assailants that they scattered like chaff before the wind as their victim sank down exhausted on the stone steps that led up to the promenade.

Aunt John had never been seen to take any interest in a human being before, and it was something so strange to see her stoop down and wipe the blood from the child's face that Nibsey Clark, the side partner of Nosey Geoghegan, gave vent to his wonder by exclaiming, "Hully smoke, de old woman is back on earth!" and summoning a couple of companions who had not been in the fleeing mob to witness the spectacle. Whatever Aunt John may have said to the weak looking boy or what the weak looking boy said in return nobody knew. She stood by him until it got dark and time for her to tie up her purse, and then they went off together up Park row to Roosevelt street and down Roosevelt nearly to the river. Up a narrow, rickety flight of stairs she climbed and the boy followed her.

Next day he came with her to the bridge and stood at her side while she sold her papers, and the boys observed that her eyes were never removed from his face except when she had to engage the attention of a customer. Day by day this continued and through the winter up to January. The boy came with her every day, and he wore better clothing than when he was first seen at the bridge, but he seemed to be fading away.

The veins in his forehead became bluer and his white skin became whiter. He coughed and coughed, and sometimes the blood would gush from his mouth, and he would totter over to the curb and let the life current splash into the gutter. On these occasions the grief and terror of old Aunt John were pitiable. She would throw her papers beside the boy, kneel on them and put her good arm about his head, moaning all the while like an animal in distress. After the kid, as the others called him, had recovered from one of these hemorrhages he would be desperately weak for at least an hour, and Aunt John would watch over him until he was able to walk.

One day the old creature came to the bridge alone. She was in a strange and unusual state of excitement and made no attempt to sell any papers. She sought out Nosey Geoghegan and in her half paralyzed way of speaking made him understand that she wanted him to go with her, and Nosey, not being a bad fellow at heart, only a little loud mouthed at times, took Aunt John by the arm and walked with her to the tenement.

On a cot under the window lay the kid. His wan hands were crossed over his breast and between his finger tips was a faded daguerreotype, which the old woman tenderly removed and handed to Nosey. The newsboy saw the picture of a fair haired boy, with wide open eyes, and he looked at the child on the bed. The likeness between the two was startling enough to impress even the unimpressible Nosey, but, of course, the daguerreotype was that of another boy, for on the back was pasted a slip of paper on which was written: "My darling boy, John, died July 3, 1863, aged 7 years and 4 months, the day his father was killed at Gettysburg."

When Nosey looked again he realized that the kid whom he thought to be asleep, so peaceful was the smile on his parted lips, was dead. Aunt John was on her knees alongside of the cot, with her withered hand resting inert on the floor and her living arm thrown over the corpse, while the faded picture was pressed to her lips. She got up after awhile and made Nosey understand that she wanted an undertaker. So he went out to get one and incidentally to relate his experiences to his fellows, who immediately made up a purse of $1.45, which four of them took to Aunt John, telling her in their rough way that it was to buy a "wreat" of flowers for the kid." She took the money and, greatly to the surprise of the donors, patted each one of them on the head.

On the Sunday following—this was on Friday—there was a funeral from the top floor of the tenement, and when the undertaker's assistant carried out the slender coffin he saw a daguerreotype tied on the lid with a bit of twine, and the old woman told him she wanted it buried with the body. Her old heart was broken, and the remainder of other and happier days must be laid away with the memory. And the undertaker did as she wished, and heaped the cloths on the coffin and the picture.

Aunt John was never seen at the bridge again. She disappeared as suddenly and as mysteriously as she came, and the boys to this day are of the old and homely opinion that she "dried up and blowed away," because grief turned her blood to dust.—Vincent G. Cook in New York Mail.
